

A white t-shirt is hanging on a wooden hanger against a light-colored wall. The t-shirt has a crew neck and short sleeves. The text "Am I You?" is printed in a bold, black, serif font in the center of the chest. The hanger is made of dark wood and has a metal hook at the top. A small white tag is visible inside the collar of the t-shirt.

უცნობი ავტორი

არტისტერიუმი VI, თანამედროვე ხელოვნების ყოველწლიური საერთაშორისო გამოფენა და სახელოვნებო ღონისძიებების სერიაა, რომელიც 2013 წელს თბილისში 4 ოქტომბერს გაიხსნება და 14 ოქტომბრამდე გასტანს. „არტისტერიუმი“ განვითარებადი სახელოვნებო პლატფორმაა, რომლის მთავარი თემა, როგორც წესი, თანადროულ, აქტუალურ სოციო-კულტურულ პრობლემათიკას ეხმაურება და განვითარების ალტერნატიულ გზებს ეძებს.

2008 - „Modus Operandi“ - განსხვავებული გზის ძიებაში“; 2009 - „ცვლილებების მანიფესტი და შინაგანი გამოცდილება“; 2010 - „ნარმოიდგინე მომავალი“; 2011 - „თავისუფალი ვარდნა“; 2012 - „პროტესტი, რომელიც არასდროს მთავრდება“ - ბოლო 5 წლის მანძილზე „არტისტერიუმის“ ფარგლებში წარმოდგენილი თემატური გამოფენებია.

2013 წლის მე-6 არტისტერიუმის თემაა: „ვარ მე შენ?“. განსხვავებულის, უჩვეულოს, გაუგებრის მიღება-არმიღება დღევანდელი მნიშვნელოვანი პრობლემაა. უამრავი ფილოსოფიური, სოციალური თუ ფსიქოლოგიური თეორია აღწერს ჩვენს დამოკიდებულებას ეროვნებების, რელიგიების უმცირესობების, განსხვავებულად მოაზროვნეთა, გვერდით მყოფი ადამიანის - „სხვის“ მიმართ. როგორც ჟაკ დერიდა ამბობს: „სხვას ვერასოდეს გაიგებ როგორც თანყოფნის (presence)... „სხვას“ ყოველგვარი კავშირი აქვს განწყვეტილი თანყოფნის ფენომენოლოგიურ მეტაფიზიკასთან - „სხვას“ ვერასოდეს გაიგებ თეორიულ აქტში; ეს მხოლოდ ეთიკური პასუხისმგებლობის მეშვეობითაა შესაძლებელი: მე ვიღებ პასუხისმგებლობას სხვაზე“. ეთიკური პასუხისმგებლობის აღების სირთულე და ზოგ შემთხვევაში შეუძლებლობა, ხშირად ხდება კულტურული გაუცხოების, რელიგიური, ტერიტორიული თუ პირადი კონფლიქტების მიზეზი.

სახელწოდების ინსპირაციის წყარო ქართველი მხატვრის, ილია ზაუტაშვილის 1998 წლის პერფორმანსი „ვარ მე შენ?“ გახდა. პერფორმანსის ოთხი მონაწილე 2 წყვილადაა გაყოფილი, რომლებიც ერთმანეთს „გაგებას“ ცდილობენ, მაგრამ წინააღმდეგობებს აწყდებიან. პირველ წყვილს თვალები აქვს ახვეული და ერთმანეთს ეხება, მეორე წყვილი კი სხვადასხვა ენაზე დანერჩილ წიგნს ხმამაღლა, ერთდროულად კითხულობს. ნამუშევარი აჩვენებს კომუნიკაციის სირთულეს, როცა კონცენტრაცია მხოლოდ საკუთარ ენაზე, სიტყვების ფორმალურობაზე და კულტურულ ან ქცევით (behavioral) სტერეოტიპებზე ხდება, ან როდესაც სუბიექტის მიღება-არმიღება წინასწარგანწყობით შემოიფარგლება.

არტისტერიუმის 2013 და მისი თემა „ვარ მე შენ?“ მონაწილეებს თავაზობს „სხვისი“, როგორც ფენომენის კვლევას და ჩვენი დამოკიდებულების და პასუხისმგებლობის ეკოლოგიას „სხვის“ მიმართ. გამოფენის მიზანი თუნდაც მიუღებელ იდეოლოგიასთან ან ცხოვრების წესთან თანაარსებობის გზების ძიება და თანაგრძობის შესაძლებლობაა. წლევანდელი თემა იმ გავლენების აღმოჩენის საშუალებასაც იძლევა, რომელიც აყალიბებს ჩვენს დამოკიდებულებას გარშემო არსებულ მრავალფეროვანი ნააზრებისა თუ გამოვლინების, თუნდაც სიცოცხლის სხვა ფორმების მიმართ (ფლორა, ფაუნა), რომლებიც ჩვენს გვერდით ამ პლანეტაზე არსებობენ.

The Artisterium VI, the annual international contemporary art exhibition and series of public art events, opens in the Georgian capital of Tbilisi on October 4th, and runs through October 14, 2013. „Artisterium“ is an evolving curatorial platform. Each year its overall theme always responds to prevailing social concerns, such as alternative ways of development: („Modus Operandi – in Quest of a Different Way“, 2008), changes within general and personal levels („The Manifest of Changes and an Inner Experience“, 2009), artistic reflections on re-envisioning the future („Imagine the Future“, 2010), the willingness to embrace open-ended subjects as a way to critically engage with important social, political, urban, private and aesthetic issues („Free Fall“, 2011) and research artistic and theoretical reflections on a wide range of PROTEST („The Protest that Never Ends“, 2012).

The theme of the Artisterium 6 / 2013 is „Am I You?“ Acceptance of the unfamiliar is a crucial aspect of today’s life. There are many kinds of philosophical, social and psychological theories to describe our relationships to minorities, other nations, other religions, or people who think differently – The Other. In the words of Jacques Derrida, „the other can never be understood as presence, but only with concepts like traces and exteriority. He has completely broken with the phenomenological metaphysics of presence — the other can never be understood in a theoretical act, but only by means of ethical responsibility: I take responsibility for the other.“ The uneasiness of this kind of responsibility triggers moments of cultural misunderstanding, religious, territorial or personal conflicts.

The theme takes as its source of inspiration a performance by the Georgian artist Iliko Zautashvili „Am I You?“ (1998). In the performance the artist uses four participants divided into two pairs and asks them to make attempts at understanding each other. However obstacles are placed between them, like an eye bandage that limits vision while the pair touches each other. In another case the participants recite texts in different languages simultaneously. The work shows the impossibility of communication when fixed within one’s own language, the formality of words and cultural or behavioral stereotypes. It also explores the difficulty in discovering a mutual understanding even when the information is purely sensual.

The Artisterium 2013 theme of „Am I You?“ encourages participants to research the phenomena of the Other and the ecology of our relation and responsibility to the Other. We wish to explore possible ways of coexisting with unfamiliar, different or even disagreeable ideologies and lifestyles, while at the same time calling for participation, understanding and empathy. Through the year’s theme we hope to reveal modes of exploring the influence that shape our connections to divers thoughts and attitudes – and even the life forms – living next to us on this planet

Gabriel Edward Adams

Born in 1978, Pittsfield, USA. Gabriel Adams' works have been exhibited internationally in the US, Asia, Eastern Europe, and New Zealand. Since the turn of the millennium his work has focused primarily on installation, relational aesthetics, ephemeral works, as well as painting and drawing. His most recent exhibition at CY-Art Gallery in Seoul, South Korea (2013), highlighted documentation of a social artwork Ice Cream Mirage, in which the artist embarked on a journey across the Silk Road with an ice cream machine. Adams "...carried an inflatable shark to the vanishing sea" of Uzbekistan and exhibited aspects of the performance for Artisterium V, in Tbilisi, Georgia (2012). He has made many projects with the international group Nine Dragon Heads, in which he concentrated on environment and ephemeral art works. Other recent exhibitions have included Art Sea International Festival of Contemporary Art, Poti, Georgia, in 2012; Art Bosphorus Contemporary Art Fair, Istanbul, Turkey, in 2012; Sarajevo Winter Festival, Bosnia-Herzegovina, in 2012; And the video installation of Media Becomes US, Çanakkale Biennale, Çanakkale, Turkey, in 2011. The Artist was born in 1978 in Massachusetts and graduated from the Maine College of Art with honors in sculpture.

Why is it that we find ourselves in the situations that we do, between various groups, tribes, nations and countries, in relation to Nature, or even within interpersonal situations?

Held within a landscape, a white canvas serves as a metaphor for the greater complexities of this relationship between human consciousness and physical outer space (nature), and our participation in life within the gamut of human experience.

From an artists' perspective the dilemma of what to make, how to make, and the content held within that space form a significant aspect of cognitive human inquiry and participation. We can use this concept as a lens into the basic ideas behind invention, the production of meaning, and essentially how we act and create the way we live.

Anna-Lea Kopperi

Anna-Lea Kopperi works on conceptual art with different medias. She is known for her installations and sculptures, environmental and interactive works, which arise from the spatial, architectural and social aspects of the site. In the site-specific installations she explores the concepts of a site and situation with material, light and interaction. In her ephemeral oeuvre, Kopperi combines her perceptions of spaces with existential questions like life and death, time and continuity.

Anna-Lea Kopperi's works have been exhibited internationally in Europe and Asia since the early 1990s. Her recent solo exhibitions are Plants for Free, video installation and performance at the Kunsthalle Helsinki, Mountain in my Head at ACCEA in Yerevan, Thought Lift at Amos Anderson Art Museum in Helsinki, and Across the Air at the Durbar Hall Ground in Kochi, India. The works of Kopperi have been exhibited e.g. at the Artisterium 5 in Tbilisi, the 8th Gyumri Biennale in Armenia, The 3rd International Festival in St. Petersburg, Junge Kunst International in Lübeck and Jenseits der Norm, Documenta X fringe Exhibition, in Kassel. Her permanent sculptures have been erected around Europe. The artist was born 1960 in Finland, studied in Finland, France and Germany, and graduated from the Academy of Fine Arts in Düsseldorf in 1996.

IN – OUT is a spatial sculpture with two different spaces. The lower space is made out of black thread. The upper space is made out of white thread. Both spatial sculpture forms are hanging from the ceiling to the floor. The visitors may enter inside of these spaces and experience being inside of a black and also inside of a white space.

These two sculpture forms make visible the inner lives and the real differences between people as well as the differences between the different stages of a human being. A person may be covered by darkness and a person may be filled with light in every circumstance of life. The real difference between people can be defined by the own personal selection of attitudes in different situations.

Juha van Ingen

b.1963 in Hämeenlinna, Finland. Juha van Ingen utilizes various mediums in his works ranging from objects and spaces to moving image and sound. His works have been exhibited/screened since 1989 in eg. Kiasma Museum of Contemporary Art, Helsinki, Casino Luxembourg - Forum D'art Contemporain, Luxembourg, Videonale, Bonn, Arnolfini Centre For The Contemporary Arts , Bristol, Galician Center of Contemporary Arts CGAC, Santiago de Compostela, Stuttgarter Filmwinter and City of Paris Museum of Modern Art. An excerpt from a text by Kari Yli-Annala (art critic/artist): "Juha van Ingen's tactics are marked by a kind of fundamental insight about the relationship between the elements he is using, around which he then constructs a kind of game for the viewer. His approach makes use even of the small mistakes (sometimes called artifacts) produced by technology, showing that they are in fact important and un-separable part of the systems in which they are appearing."

Van Ingen's works are neither monolithic nor static, but changeable and mobile. The works occur in living intervals of time, and often involve subtle alterations of the aesthetic assumptions and physical conditions underlying beneath the perception."

"Auguste Comte was the first philosopher to make a serious attempt to systematically study generations. In Cours de philosophie positive Comte suggested that social change is determined by generational change and in particular conflict between successive generations. As the members of a given generation age, their "instinct of social conservation" becomes stronger, which inevitably and necessarily brings them into conflict with the "normal attribute of youth" innovation.

Generation X is generally defined as those born after the Post World War II baby boom ended. Demographers, historians and commentators use beginning birth dates from the early 1960s to the early 1980s.

Generation Z is a name used (although other terms exist) for the cohort of people born from the early 2000s to the present day who are distinct from the preceding Millennial Generation."
Wikipedia

"...I like to work in and with different mediums. Often the starting point for my work is a situation, space or a concept that I happen to encounter. My working process starts by stripping the subject I have selected down to basic elements, which I then recompose to meet my artistic objectives. Coincidence is my favorite tool, if I would have to name one..." Juha van Ingen

Kalle Hamm / Dzamil Kamanger

b. 1969 in Finland. Kalle Hamm's works of art examine cultural encounters and their impacts both in historical and contemporary contexts. He is also dealing with the concept of freedom and how it has been defined and understood in different times and ideologies.

DZAMIL KAMANGER

b. 1948 in Iran. Dzamil Kamanger is an Iranian Kurd based in Helsinki, who is concerned with his own experiences as a refugee by using traditional Iranian handicraft techniques. They have collaborated together since the year 1999 although both of them are also working independently. They have made together several art projects dealing with the position of marginality in mainstream culture and complexity of the multiple identities. They have also been interested in global networks for example travelling routes of plants and food ingredients. They are working with video, photograph and site-specific art works and interventions in public space.

ABC Flag (Kurmanji Cyrillic) is composed of a white Kurmanji Cyrillic alphabet printed on a red flag. Kurds still do not have a unified writing system for their language, but it is written at least in four different writing systems. One of them is the Kurmanji Cyrillic, which is used in the former Soviet States. In this work of art, the status of Kurds is used as a metaphor for any kind of culture or individuals, who are in danger to become integrated to major culture. Thus the theme of the exhibition "Am I you?" is expanded to the meaning "Is my culture your culture?"

The red flag is usually associated with the revolution or emancipatory demands. Instead of slogans there is the alphabet with exemplary images and words printed from the first grade ABC book. Every child, the future of culture and society, has a right for his or her culture and thus to his or her language and history.

Palimpsest / Rianú Project

Cló and The Living Archive have worked with Artisterium since its inception in 2008, to represent Ireland (both North and South) at Artisterium. This year Cló have invited Claire Halpin and Eoin Mac Lochlainn to curate the Palimpsest / Rianú Project which involves eight artists creating works collaboratively as a curatorial concept responding to the theme "Am I you?" for Artisterium VI.

THE PALIMPSEST / RIANÚ PROJECT

A palimpsest is a manuscript page from a scroll or book from which the text has been scraped or washed off and which can be used again. The word "palimpsest" comes through Latin palimpsestus from Ancient Greek παλίμψηστος (palímpsestos, "scratched or scraped again") originally compounded from πάλιν (palin, "again") and ψάω (psao, "I scrape") literally meaning "scraped clean and used again."

Each of the artists were invited to produce an initial image which they emailed to the second artist who responded to it by working over it or manipulating it in some way to create a new image. He/she then rescanned the image and emailed it on to the third artist who also responded to it, and so on. This process continued until each of the eight initial images were circulated and worked on by each of the eight artists.

About Cló

Cló is an artist-lead initiative providing a platform for creative exchange between artists worldwide and the Gaeltacht or Gaelic-speaking community in the North West of Donegal. It is an art and media workshop combining traditional forms of printmaking with contemporary visual media which facilitates artists and groups to create original works which can be used for exhibition, documentation or broadcast. Cló also publishes limited edition prints, DVDs, CDs and Artists' books.

Cló and The Living Archive initiates and promotes collaborative arts projects and public art commissions and explores relationships between indigenous cultural forms and new forms of creative expression. It also fosters the emergence of artists in the Gaeltacht by providing access to professional development services.

Statement

"...it can happen that a civilization can be imprisoned in a linguistic contour which no longer matches the landscape of ... fact."

Translations, Brian Friel

Placenames are the product of language and can carry an important cultural history. As a result of the Ordnance Survey of Ireland in 1824, Gaelic placenames were replaced with Anglicized spellings. The original meanings became obsolete and the new spellings bore no congruence with reality. Focusing on Donegal, I've been de-Anglicizing placenames in order to find their original meaning. Some still resonate with the landscape while others are now completely disparate.

I use printmaking to create my own personal maps, which act as documentation of my interaction with the landscape. Placenames are an essential component in defining our relationship with our physical environment. Although the lexical meaning may no longer be pertinent to the land today, their function as a name survives independently, bearing witness to changes in language and culture.

Statement

My practice and research examines the materiality of a pre-existing artworks and objects and their complex relation to time. The ongoing intention of this drawing practice is to register and map the effect time has on the materials and supports of early film and iconic paintings. The gathering of particular time periods presents a framework for reflection on the role that time and technology plays in mediating our understanding of image creation, the preservation of its unstable form and the making visible of its own history.

CLAIRE HALPIN

b. 1973 in Dublin, Ireland. Claire Halpin graduated from D.I.T with B.A Honours in Painting and went on to complete her Masters at Gray's School of Art, Aberdeen, Scotland. Since graduating she has exhibited widely in group exhibitions in Ireland and abroad - most recently at – Water Tower Art Fest, Sofia, Bulgaria, Fast Moving Consumer Goods, Talbot Gallery, Dublin, Sculpture in Context, National Botanic Gardens 2012, Dublin, 182nd Royal Hibernian Academy Annual Exhibition, Dublin and Artisterium V, Tbilisi, Georgia 2012. Claire has had a number of solo exhibitions including Reconstructions at Talbot Gallery, Dublin (2011) and Droichead Arts Centre, Drogheda (2012), Tabula Rasa at Cavan County Museum (2011), Anaesthetic Aesthetics at Rua Red South Dublin Arts Centre, Tallaght (2010), Always Now at Talbot Gallery, Dublin (2008), Eidetic Amalgams at Basement Gallery, Dundalk (2006) and solo exhibitions at Triskel Arts Centre, Cork, Model Arts Centre, Sligo. Her paintings are included in many private, public and corporate collections.

Statement

My current work takes its imagery from a number of sources from media photos of areas of conflict and modern warfare to paintings from the canon of art history from Byzantine and Early Renaissance. The techniques employed range from the traditional form and materials of icon painting through to traditional oil painting, drawing and photographic transfer. The themes in the work concern the use of imagery and how we perceive and interpret imagery and artworks depending on media used and how the context in which we view images influences our perception and interpretation of them. My work attempts to raise questions about how we remember the past; choose to record history - the veracity of painting, photography, and the media in documenting future history.

COLIN MARTIN

b. 1973 in Dublin, Ireland. Colin Martin lives and works in Dublin. He studied at DIT 1994 and NCAD 2010. Recent Exhibitions include 'a yellow rose' 2012 Freemasons Hall Dublin, 'Cyclorama' 2011 Basic Space, 'Basic Spaces' 2011 Cake Contemporary, 'Re:Public' Temple Bar Gallery 2010. He has been the recipient of a number of award including Arts Council Visual Arts Bursary 2004, 2007, 2012, the Hennessy Craig Scholarship 2004 and the Thomas Damaann award 2007.

Artist's statement

Colin Martin's current practice concerns the relationship between Cinema and Space as worlds we move through either physically or virtually. It references both Pre-narrative Cinema and Structuralist Cinema. Martin uses the formal devices of cinema to explore locations to create non narrative films. These cast the locations themselves as central characters. The spaces are conduit spaces that carry a social, political or cultural charge. Many of the locations used in these films are bounded, idealized spaces that serve to accommodate things that may not ordinarily exist together naturally (Museums, Gardens, Film Studios) and that exert a sense of control and order over their subjects. This is formally echoed in the manner in which the camera relates to these spaces in long extended takes and unedited field recording. These films reference directly the illusion making strategies of narrative film and cast the viewer physically as an active agent in the consumption and reception of these images.

EOIN MAC LOCHLAINN

b. in Dublin, Ireland. Eoin Mac Lochlainn graduated from NCAD, Dublin in 2000. He has had ten solo exhibitions in Ireland including "Lorg" in the Royal Hibernian Academy (Ashford Gallery) in 2002, "Requiem" in Kilmainham Gaol, Dublin in 2005, "We are where we are" in The Paul Kane Gallery, Dublin in 2011 and "Home" in The Bourn Vincent Gallery in the University of Limerick in 2012. He also participated in selected exhibitions (including RHA, RUA, Iontas, Éigse, Oireachtas) and in various group shows in Ireland, England, Georgia and China. Recently he took part in a group show in Leuven, Belgium as part of the Irish Presidency of the EU. He won The Golden Fleece Award in 2008, was shortlisted for the Davy Portrait Award in 2010 and won the Keating McLaughlin Medal at the RHA annual exhibition. His work is in the collections of: OPW, AIB, Bank of Ireland, AXA Insurance, University of Limerick, the Boyle Civic Collection and in various private collections.

Statement

During a residency in Temple Bar Gallery & Studios, Dublin, I began collecting fingerprints from visitors to my studio. Unlike in a police station, people were free to choose from my palette, the colours they might use to make their impressions. It was fascinating (for the visitors as well as for myself) to study the endless combinations of lines and to notice the particular differences and similarities on each person's hands.

I made no attempt to catalogue or categorise these prints. Indeed, I overlaid several prints to produce a kaleidoscope of colour on the one page. The intersection of two prints often produced interesting results. So I began isolating the interesting sections and cutting them out. Like visualising faces in the clouds, I could see tiny faces, tiny landscapes, rippling water, tiny maps etc. in the sections of fingerprint. Once you discover one image, you realise that there are many more to be found.

KATE MURPHY

Statement

b. 1972 in Dublin, Ireland. Kate Murphy graduated from the National College of Art & Design in 2000 with an honours degree in Fine Art, Sculpture. She began to direct her practice through painting in 2003. Up until its closure in 2010, Kate was showing her work with Stone Gallery in Dublin, with solo exhibitions there in 2006, 2007 and 2009. She was short-listed for the Golden Fleece Award in 2010 and was awarded the first prize Visual Arts Bursary by Wexford County Council in 2009 which supported a solo exhibition in Wexford Arts Centre in 2011. Kate was one of four successful candidates to be recently awarded a placement on The Living Art Project, a 15 week artist-in-schools/studio support programme for County Wexford which is funded by the Arts Council of Ireland. She has a solo exhibition in Talbot Gallery in Dublin in October 2013. Kate's work is in the collection of the Bank of Ireland, The Office of Public Works, Wicklow County Council and in private collections.

Kate's work is concerned with 'the house', as an extension of The Self, as an archetype of both physical and psychological boundary and as the primary site of the development of personal, cultural, gender and sexual identity.

The house or dwelling, as an artifact, serves as a source of materials, forms and objects with which to investigate notions of social convention, ritual, nostalgia and the unconscious. The work is very personally grounded in expressions of longing, loss, embodiment and the duality of protection versus isolation.

Through painting, found video and installation, the home is presented as having a dual function; as a private stage, as well as a very public show-case. Tension is created in the work by the exposure of the raw point between these public and private elements of the home, where the public face of 'the house' buffers the intimate space of 'the home'.

Statement

I create works with foundations in the narrative but with the gesture of the sensory abstract. This work is grounded in the experience of daily observing and remembering. The experience of looking is not only based on what you see with your eyes - the immediate sensation of something - but also how personal history, individual understanding and internal thought process alter what is perceived. These 'new realities' with their combination of personal narrative, of momentary and fleeting images, are brought together, transformed and communicated through the process of painting. The process of revealing and concealing the narrative, of scraping back creates a history or archeology within each piece. The observation yields the subject but the process is abstract. Each work enjoys both a tangible and a subliminal existence. The spaces and silences created in-between remain for the observer to explore.

Statement

My art practice has been an investigation of material processes and procedures, an exploration of the mysterious divide between material reality and the disembodied world of abstract sequenced thought. In my practice I work directly and experimentally with materials, constructing open-ended arrangements of order and entropy, conservation and decay. I work with natural and manmade fragments, paying attention to their distinct physical properties – their weight, their balance, their particular way of occupying space, how they impinge on each other. In exploring these dynamics my art consistently operates on the plane of the personal, the particular and the intimate - the world of cataclysmic, hairsbreadth differences, irrational attachments and temporary stop-gap measures.

Summer time and hundreds of flies come in to our kitchen from the pasture while we cook.
 Sorry flies, but you're not invited to share our food.
 What, you're still here?
 Kill! Kill! Kill!
 Now we have hundreds of fly corpses and yet more flies coming to see what we've done to their fellows. They turn their multi-faceted eyes at us and we feel bad, very bad.
 Later that summer I hang my painting of a checkerboard black and white pattern on the kitchen wall.
 The next day there are no flies to be seen.
 Could it be that the fly eye with its multi-faceted kaleidoscope lens cannot bear to look at my painting?
 And also, how about the zebra? (Not that we have zebras on the pasture around our house.)
 But think of the zebra wearing its black and white stripes to repel those annoying flies.
 A new fashion is born.

Nine Dragon Heads - Nomadic Party

Nine Dragon Heads accepts a critical attitude towards contemporary art while leading its trend and intends to deal with the points that have stayed far away from the mainstream visual-art context or that have been dismissed as "different" areas. The 20103 <Nomadic Party> is a project that aims to handle extended artistic layers derived from the networking of the environment, city, festival, and art, as such it brilliantly embodies the value of genuine mutual communications in an artistic way.

Nomadic Party, jointly planned by Nine Dragon Heads, aims to provide "The Plaza of Nomadic Festival" through various channels, such as shows, exhibitions, performances, conferences, and artist talks. Nine Dragon Heads, which was kicked off in 1995 with an international integrated art character, crosses genre boundaries and goes smoothly over the customary regulations governing expression. Nine Dragon Heads built a community based on communication and cooperation in the past 19 years while maintaining a multinational human network, which can be described as having been imbued with the concrete practice of the values for which it was fundamentally intended.

As we all know from the series of global events taking place at present as a result of human beings' violent rule of and control over nature and the environment, the ecosystem and, more profoundly, the balance of the whole universe, fell a long time ago. Furthermore, the problems that arose due to such fall are becoming more serious by the day. Nine Dragon Heads proclaims that human beings are only a part of nature and the environment surrounding them and are not their conqueror. It seeks to recover the correlation and genuineness of communities while stressing the balance and harmony between human beings and nature, and the world in which they are situated.

Nine Dragon Heads approaches community based on continuous mutual reciprocity and embrace, not with an exclusive and closed structure, and it believes that the activities of such a community can maintain the correct relationship among human beings, nature, and the world. Therefore, Nine Dragon Heads rejects a closed gathering based on simple interests and seeks an idealistic community where coexistence and cooperation are possible and where the consideration and embrace of oneself and heterogeneous others are possible. This spirit is expected to spread out based on the trust in art's function of curing.

We talk about the personal myth existing in each of us whether we realize it or not. The roots of this myth grow from our true nature and this is a hidden, irrational animal side that cannot be easily accepted by a contemporary human being living in an urban environment.

We talk about a personal part of the general myth, which irrevocably connects us to our nature. Clear evidence of this connection can scare us, appearing in the archetypical fears of many adults. We disown this evidence, but they stay unacknowledged, though they are a part of us.

We need to discuss accepting the existence of this myth and the possibility of personal confluence with it that survives only in rare pagan mythological rituals. But we want it in reality; every person bears a personal myth of this type. The myth develops and evolves; this is unavoidable and continuous.

Our goal is to find this intense moment of clarity:

- the moment of acceptance of this nature as a part of ourselves.
- the moment of discovering in ourselves the mythological beast, and the reunion with the general myth and with its united composition and its rhythm.
- the moment that develops like an image on film, the personal myth on the surface of everyday life.

It is the moment of the meeting and understanding of a hidden layer of our reality, in which myth becomes the truth of now, where daily and mythological worlds galvanize with each other. Then we can take possession of the interaction with our own life on its different levels.

Reflecting on the theme "Am I You?" I imagine a situation in which a group, a team or society with ideological unity (internal or external) that defines the commonality of forms and behaviors and in which a multiplicity replaces the variety of forms, where intense individualism makes its appearance...

I am interested in one of the possible scenarios of the relationships between collectivity and individualism, possible rejection versus intentional provocation. The very ambiguity of this kind of situation is a reason to contemplate...

The Fleetgroup / Bessa Kartlelishvili

The Fleet Group is an artistic initiative that has been running since 2011 by Tbilisi based artists: Vasili Macharadze, Koka Vashakidze, and Bessa Kartlelishvili.

The cornerstones of the Fleet Group's vision and activity are expressive research with a sharp humor, exploring social and political mysticism and its influence on one's personal life. Regardless of the media they use, producing visually articulated art works is a main objective of the group.

As the group members say: "We are the fleet, floating between the shores of rationality in the ocean of irrationality."

THE STONE

Please Don't Leave Me
(The title of Bas Jan Ader's installation)

Often in the fairy tales, heroes arrive at a stone at a crossroad with messages or warnings on it, giving directions, showing where brothers will split...

The installation "The Stone" is a big and "heavy" piece of rock displaying the text "IOU" (the abbreviation 'I owe you' is a written promise, a signed document acknowledging a debt) written in a heart shape (looking visually like as a tree carving saying "I love you"). The Stone expresses that we are responsible for one another; as the stone here is no longer a fork in the road, but rather a junction - a point where we have an obligation to appreciate each other's attitudes, carry each other's burdens and meet on controversial issues.

The common ground in these difficult interactions between 'the self' and 'the other', we believe, is love, filled with friendship, politeness and indulgence that lubricates the edges of different surfaces, softening our touch points and bringing us together.

PERFECT POLITICIAN

Curated by Tatiana Kochubinska

This absurd dialogue questions our obsession in searches for the other, exploring the other just to discover, who I really am. Why does my identity dissolve with the identity of the other? Why might anybody recognize the other in me? And is it possible to describe the other?

Why do we need the figure of the other? Just to reach self-justification in shifting responsibility? Is there any possible way to find a physical form in describing the other, to figure out the membrane for this abstract notion? The figure of the other is symptomatic for today's Ukrainian social and political situation. A saying "if only the other leader we had..." becomes typical representation of the nation. The above quoted dialogue could be extrapolated to the Ukrainian society, which is being extremely politicized and aware of political maneuverings. In Ukrainian mentality generally there exists an ephemeral figure of the other who might come as Messiah to solve problems. And here it becomes quite easy just to delegate the responsibility on him. The whole story of the country, which is defined by permanent historical breaks, attempts to find salvation thanks to the other, who actually undertakes responsibility. Society willingly assigns responsibility to the new other, however, never finds satisfaction, trying to find the other again expecting him to be more adequate to the new social-political situation.

The process of delegating responsibility is infinite. With the new drawing-based installation by Artem Andreichuk, the artist proposes to make a point by creating a "real" image of the other, trying to elaborate his appearance and to give him a physical presence. Installation "Perfect politician" aims at finding an alternative position in our interpretation of the other, trying to create an ideal image of the other in order to achieve harmonious development. The figure of an average politician becomes an embodiment of the other, who takes responsibility for the people. Acknowledgment that "I am my politician, and my politician is me", i.e. "I am the other, and the other is me" is a starting point for reflection in this project. The artist in a way becomes a social actor interrogating one hundred Ukrainians asking them "who is responsible for the prosperity of society?" and making them describe an appearance of an ideal politician. Upon the words of average citizens of Ukraine the artist makes A4 drawings, and creates an installation out of them.

In a way this installation presents a portrait of the perfect politician drawn upon the words of ordinary people. With this installation the artist questions, who is responsible for us: society that chooses a politician (the other) or politician has a responsibility before society, or it should be a shared responsibility. To avoid any contradictions, the artist proposes citizens just to create an ideal perfect politician, a kind of canon similar to that of an icon, which will be conveyed from the generation to generation, personifying an ideal image of the other who takes responsibility. Namely this ideal collaboratively created representation becomes unchangeable during the new power replacement. The artist proposes us to try to become the other for a while in a sense of taking responsibility on ourselves.

IDEAL POLITICIAN, 2013, drawing, installation, dimensions variable
Ideal politician is the politician in a coffin.

IDEAL POLITICIAN, 2013, drawing, installation, dimensions variable

The ideal politician should be complete mediocrity: medium height, not very thick and not too thin, with perfect hair, without striking facial features (long nose or protruding ears), with no physical defects. In everyday life, such a person does not evoke any emotion; you are neither bored, or having fun with him; he is able to talk for hours about anything and can keep a conversation on any topic.

Andrea Luka Zimmerman

Andrea is an artist filmmaker and cultural activist. She has been producing and directing her own films since 1998, originally as part of the film collective Vision Machine, which worked predominantly in Indonesia exploring the impact of globalisation and working directly with plantation workers. From this period developed first of all the Globalisation Tapes (2002, 75mins). This period also prompted early research for her essay film Prisoner of War (2014), which investigates US militarism and foreign policy through a character study of one of its most enduring rogue agents. She has just completed Taskafa: Stories of the Street, a film about resistance and co-existence. Voiced by John Berger, from his novel King, it is told through the lives of street dogs in Istanbul, which premiered at the Istanbul Film Festival in April 2013. She is currently in production with her new essay film Estate, a Reverie.

Tracking the passing of Hackney's Haggerston Estate and wider utopian principles of social housing, Estate offers an unruly celebration of extraordinary everyday humanity. As a 1930s block is bulldozed, a luxury-apartment-complex rises. Challenging tired stereotypes, Estate interweaves intimate long-term observational footage with the residents' own historical re-enactments and dramatised reveries.

Capturing a moment of imminent transition, the artist's essay Estate reflects on urgent matters of regeneration, gentrification and architecture; its reasons, possibilities and consequences. But more importantly, it is a film about time and place, dreams and wonder. During this moment, where one structure has broken down, and a new one is about to form, another space unfolds; a space of proposals, of uncertainty, and of absolute initiative. In this opening, how might we ask important questions of our ideas of home, of history, always in the making, and of our capacities of imagination; that which influences not only how we're seen, but also how we see; how we dream...

Estate is the last and most ambitious of works on the Haggerston estate, made by Fugitive Images; following the public art / photo-installation i am here (2009-2013; iamhere.org.uk) and the artists' book Estate: Art, Politics and Social Housing in Britain (2010; fugitiveimages.org.uk/projects), all of which have gained international acclaim.

Statement

I grew up on a pioneering Munich housing-estate, one of Europe's largest. I have lived in London since 1991 and for 17 years on the Haggerston Estate, throughout its 'sink' years. My positive experience differs from the clichéd 'trouble' narratives. Indeed, my years here have fundamentally formed my understanding of what it means to 'belong', to a community, a neighbourhood, a city.

The ongoing systematic 'demolition' of fundamental aspects of the British Welfare State finds its most tangible expression in the wholesale change of policies regarding social-housing and the makeup of our inner cities.

The essay film in its potential for hybridity of shape and form, for genuine remembrance and celebration, is crucial here, acknowledging that this condemned estate has been a home and refuge for many people, in all aspects of their lives.

With Estate, I wish to explore these disjunctions between public and private memory. I want to boldly challenge tabloid stereotypes of housing estates and their inhabitants as a threatening under class, to celebrate the diversity and resilience of its residents.

NEZAKET EKICI

b. 1970 in Turkey. Nezaket Ekici's (works and lives in Germany since 1973) performances, installations, and videos are inspired by her bi-cultural background, German and Turkish, and relates to a narrative of art history while inspired from daily life situations. She studied performance art under Marina Abramovic at Hochschule der Bildenden Künste Braunschweig and her works have been shown internationally since 2000 (Selection): the 50th Venice Biennale (2003), P.S.1 New York (2004), Art Fair ART FORUM Berlin, ART FRANKFURT (2004), Proje4L Elgiz Museum of Contemporary Art, Istanbul, (2005); Venice Biennale (2007); Museum of Contemporary Art Taipei (2007); 5th Latin-American Biennial of Visual Arts Vento Sul, Curitiba, Brasil (2009); Kunstverein Friedrichshafen (2010) The First Mediterranean Biennial of Contemporary Art, Haifa(2010); Museum Alex Mylona, Athen (2010), Kunsthalle Exnergasse, Viena (2010); Mardin Biennale (2010); Cobra Museum Amsterdam (2011), ZKM Karlsruhe (2011), Villa Empain Foundation Brüssel (2011), Istanbul Modern (2011); ICAS Singapore (2012); Esbjerg Kunstmuseum Kopenhagen (2012); Museum Boijmans Van Beuningen Rotterdam (2012); Centre of Contemporary Art Torun (2012); Wilhelm Lehbruck Museum Duisburg (2012); Arts Council of Princeton, New Jersey (2012); White Box (Munich 2013); Soho 20 Chelsea Gallery NYC (2013); Bahrain National Museum (2013); Maison de la Catalanité Perpignan (2013); Dr. M. IN-RELATION

„In-Relation“ is an art project of Nezaket Ekici and Shahar Marcus that developed from the collaboration of the two artists, exploring time, space, culture and religion, resulting in the exhibition at Braverman Gallery in Tel Aviv. The exhibition includes a unique live-performance „Floating Ourselves“ as well as 4 video-performances.

The two artists are in relation, because they collaborate cross cultural and cross religious as German based Muslim and Israeli based Jewish. As well they bridge long distances between Berlin and Tel Aviv, therefore taking travel time to cross space. But there is a more significant point to it. Focusing the origin of the Latin word „relation“, meaning: „bringing back“, the real approach of the two artists reveals itself. Looking at the video works of Nezaket and Shahar, they apparently bring back a knowledge that has been forgotten by most of us: They bring us into relation with ourselves. All 4 video works shown in the exhibition take place on holy grounds, the Israeli desert and the dead sea, where people of all times and from all continents came to find out the truth about themselves, about god and the eternity of being. All works in this exhibition work on the old philosophical task, it seems: „gnôthi seautón“ – recognize yourself.

The video-performance „Sand Clocks“ is shot in the Israeli desert, showing 9 performers of different ages,

b. 1971 in Israel. Shahar Marcus is an interdisciplinary artist who works primarily in video, performance and sculpture. In his works he relates his body to organic and perishable materials, such as dough, bread, juice or ice. His relationship to the materials examines the position and the role of his body as both human and creator. His choice of perishables likewise highlights the nature of art and life. Marcus had exhibited in many exhibitions around the world including The Tate Modern in London, The Israel Museum and the Tel Aviv Museum in Israel, The Charlottenburg Kunsthalle in Copenhagen, The Moscow and Poznan Biennales and other venues in Germany France, Italy and USA cultural and religious backgrounds, confronting all of us with the fact, that time is running through our fingers like sand. The video-performance „Salt Dinner“ shows both artists sharing a table of food on the Dead Sea in wavy waters, bringing into mind that „everything is in flux“, like ancient Heraklit said. In the video-performance „Methexis“, Nezaket Ekici floats in an oversized white dress on the Dead Sea directed with her face down, being lifted towards the sky by white flying balloons attached to the dress – pointing out the transcendence of life. The same does the video-performance „salt&ever“, in which Shahar Marcus is walking right on the water of the Dead Sea, like Jesus did according to the bible. And finally in the Live-Performance „Floating Ourselves“, in which the artist's walk towards each other, bying every step with drinking a glass of water till they meet in the middle like crushing together, in order to fulfill the circle, that „In Relation“ describes: Coming to together, here is a coming to oneself.

On first sight, it is striking, that all works are related to water and salt, even though desert means the opposite. Looking more closely to the theme, this is an essential point. Water and salt are the basis for Life and underline the statements of the video-works directing to the inner core of our self-understanding. Nezaket and Sharhar show very clearly, that we have to be aware of the time, we are living in, as well as we have to be aware, that nothing can be taken for sure – that everything is floating. And we have to understand, that our life is in between this world and another and therefore a temporal effect on the border between life and death. This all comes down to the task „recognize yourself“ and become, who you are.

It seems that this journey, Nezaket and Sharhar is taking us to, is only possible when people are willing to cross borders and speak to each other, like the two artists' did, when they decided to collaborate. New perspectives, that may even give us a clearer view on reality, only arise, when we confront ourselves with other cultures and believes, because only then, we cannot take for sure anymore our common believes and moral opinions. To achieve something means to set us „in relation“ to each other and in order to do so, it seems to be inevitable but to leave the comfort zone of our own paradigm, like Nezaket and Sharhar did: brave they are.

FLOATING OURSELVES

In the performance installation "Floating Ourselves", the artist Shahar Marcus and Nezaket Ekici move very slowly on a table towards one another. On the table up to 100 wine glasses are filled with water. Repeatedly the artists drink the water and make their way to the middle of the table coming closer and closer. The empty wine glasses are stored in pockets within their costumes. They fill up their white costumes with wine glasses: Then the artists push together and hug. With the powerful embrace many of the glasses break.

What looks at first glance like a synchronous action is not on closer inspection. Both artists move minimally different. They drink differently, have different tempo in the approach and different power potentials.

The work is developed during the collaboration between the two artists, which lasts for a year now. There are already several collaborations developed, which deals with the nature, the landscape in Israel, the desert and the Dead Sea. In all art works, the relationship between the two artists are focused. The intense experience with nature, the extreme heat in the desert and the extreme salt in the Dead Sea drove the artists during their campaigns to push themselves towards their own borders.

The idea, the thought, the draft are the bases for the execution of my artwork. Ideas come from everyday life situations, social and cultural atmospheres. Then the idea expresses itself in the performances and installation art. As well as this, I use the body as a means of expression.

The artistic idea is expressed using the body alone, as part of the installation and within the context of an audience.

The subjects I deal with are time, movement, space, material, body, action/interaction. I try to create works of art that leave for the viewer, free space for associations and new possibilities. I take a special situation from everyday life and without illustrating this one for one; I place it into a new context.

I aim to create art where all of the elements are connected together to form a whole work of art (Gesamtkunstwerk).

Ledoh

Ledoh is the founder of Salt Farm, a San Francisco-based performance collective united in its mission to explore its diverse cultural roots via the art of Butoh. Ledoh was born into the Ka-Ren hill tribe of Burma during a civil war that continues today. He performed internationally with Katsura Kan's Saltimbanques Company from 1988-2001. Since 1998, his multimedia works for SALT FARMBUTOH have electrified audiences around the globe.

Ledoh is an internationally-renowned multi-media performance artist. Ledoh trained in Japan under Butoh Master Katsura Kan (member of the radical 70s collective BYAAKOSHA), and has since electrified audiences around the globe for over 15 years with his riveting solo and ensemble performances. Born into the Ka-Ren hilltribe, Ledoh came to America at age 11 to escape the oppression of his people by the brutal dictatorship holding power in Burma. Ledoh is the founder of Salt Farm, a San Francisco-based performance collective united in its mission to explore its diverse cultural roots via the art of Butoh. As Artistic Director of SALT FARM, Ledoh choreographs with a raw movement vocabulary and directs the production of sets, video art, and musical scores to create a vital, visceral brand of live theater and site-specific installations that can soothe then shock within the span of a timeless moment.

He performed internationally with Katsura Kan's Saltimbanques Company from 1988-2001. Since 1998, his multimedia works for SALT FARMBUTOH have electrified audiences around the globe.

HEARTLAND is a feature-length multi-media dance performance integrating original Butoh choreography by Ledoh with an original score and set imagery developed in partnership with San Francisco's SALT FARM. HEARTLAND explores the theme of our bodies and hearts' sense of "coming home".

"Out of economic necessity and environmental awareness now there is a popular movement afoot to live more simply, closer to the land, with less conspicuous consumption and lower economic impact on the environment. Every culture has its heartland, the breadbasket that sustains it, a home to which we hope to one day return. As a displaced person and member of Burma's indigenous international diaspora, I will explore what it means to come home in an age of displacement, virtuality and globalization. Much of the conceptual framework for HEARTLAND was a direct result of my recent experiences in the Republic of Georgia, which gave my performance group the opportunity to reflect on core issues of interest to SALT FARM in an entirely new context.

Perhaps what motivates me is how to find your heart's home again even if in geographic terms one cannot technically go home again, since personally I have been unable to visit my own family's farm outside Rangoon since leaving Burma as a child due to the political situation there. As a choreographer I utilize Butoh because its origin lies in a movement to discover one's deepest roots, to literally return the body to the earth. In every project I explore an aspect of what it means to be truly organic and I discover in sharing this work that this is an experience that the audience's bodies literally crave."

ANATOMY OF THE GEORGIAN MELANCHOLY

St Augustine wrote about the surprising properties of human memory: "For even when I'm unhappy I can remember times when I was cheerful, and when I am cheerful I can remember past unhappiness."

This project owes much to my memories, and to circumstances I was unable to change.

In 1994 I bought an old camera and expired film for pennies at the flea market in Tbilisi, the capital of Georgia, where I moved in 1993 as an exile from a civil war in my native Abkhazia. The UN calls us "internally displaced," but the common word for us, in Georgian and Russian, was always "refugees." The old FED camera and film were sufficiently reliable equipment for what I wanted to do – become an observer, not just a participant, in refugee life. In those years I was not creating a documentary project, but now I have in my hands unique material about life in a settlement of five thousand refugees.

There was something I forgot in the intervening ten years between taking these photographs and printing them. In the precarious life of a refugee, time works differently than for the rest of the world. Instead of days, weeks, and months, you focus on seasons – all your attention is focused on preparing for winter cold or summer heat. When you're that poor, you need more time to get ready. I can remember it all, but the properties of photography – seeing it again – makes it vivid and shareable.

I want to let my archive and the project shows the dignity in daily life, of people reconstructing their life from scratch in a new place.

MURTAZ SHVELIDZE

Murtaz Shvelidze (b. 1965) has grown up in a house of an artist father, with a huge studio. So to say, he was breathing oil colors from the cradle. He says that "All of us have been through Cézanne period". I have seen in no Murtaz work a local, Georgian, theme – on the contrary, he seems to use clichés from western magazines. His canvases are kind of a game in Pop-art, even though in style it reminds me the "Neue Wilde" group.

Difference Screen

Difference Screen presents a diverse programme of international artists' moving image that reflects on changing political geographies through people and places. These artists' interpretations and responses identify places and people that inhabit them. They do not follow any particular narrative but show hidden, unexpected and often a very human view of countries, places and landscapes that have been shaped by events.

The project launched underground at Clearwell Caves, ancient iron mines in the Forest of Dean and at Meantime, Cheltenham, UK in July 2013, travelling to Ulaanbaatar, Mongolia and Seoul, South Korea before returning to London and on to Tbilisi for Artisterium.

Difference Screen traces a world-wide journey across 20 countries over 2 years, interpreted by an evolving dialogue between artists, curators and audiences via a multi-authored blog (www.differencescreen.net).

The worldwide spread of artists' moving image practice over the past 30 or 40 years has coincided with global events of historical magnitude, from the collapse of communism in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, the 9/11 attack on New York and subsequent wars in Iraq and Afghanistan, the world financial crisis of 2008 and ongoing economic tremors in Europe and, more recently, the Arab Spring movements for democratic change.

The use of the internet and social media have become an increasingly important element both in artistic practice and social change – and indeed has made this project possible. The programme has been developed through an extensive, organic network of international artists, curators and arts organisations to which potential new screening venues keep being added. The technological corollary to this revolution of global networking – the condensing of media into ever smaller devices – has allowed the transportation of the whole programme of several hours of film on a tiny memory stick a few millimetres in dimensions.

Landscape is a common reference point in these changes and conflicts, inextricably implicated over millennia. However, this is not an idealised, pictorial landscape, but one where human intervention is always present. It is a dynamic and perhaps threatening landscape, hinting at extinctions and rejuvenations, displaying fault-lines of social conflict but also evidence of the hopes and aspirations of new, interlinked communities around the globe.

Difference Screen will return to the UK with a final screening at Arnolfini Gallery, Bristol, in December 2015. By then it will have gathered the experiences and impressions of many people in different countries – with its own history providing fuel for new considerations and thoughts.

Difference Screen is curated by artist Bruce Allan and curator/facilitator Ben Eastop, Co-Director of Difference Exchange. It is funded by Arts Council England and supported by the British Council.

Difference Screen Dispatches by Gareth Evans

A metaphor brings us into relation with the universe. It is a pattern in embryo, and there would be no poetry today if we did not still retain our primitive sense that meaning must fall into a pattern, or a pattern hold meaning.

- Roger Garfitt, from www.fiveseasonspress.com/RoadToHeratIntroductionExtract.pdf

1. Creating the Conditions

Place begins when space is occupied by time. It is continued by the operation of unfolding elements within the dimensions established and is fully realised when those elements, on leaving the zone that has been created, look back as they mark the growing distance between themselves and the site and consider it, this location of origins and intention, with degrees of response that might range from longing to loathing, mistrust to melancholy; in short, the emotional memory of belonging (once, perhaps again...), which, expressed, enough, becomes culture.

Becomes identity:

I
You
We

Becomes culture...

seeing and believing differently

Can the deep space of a cave complement the mass of a mountain I wondered? We reached our destination in a few steps down from vivid heat to monochrome cold, a short journey underground where everything became different. I felt immediately inverted, my gravity and perception shaken by lands turned upside-down, dangerous journeys, perilous events, improbable space travel. I was immersed in amusing and troubling true stories told by young and old voices of many tongues and times. I was entranced by the necessity to build a shelter from dessicated sticks on a hot beach or shout at glaciers or be absolutely still for 3 minutes 31 seconds. I forgot I was cold. It was a vivid and fantastic experience.

FRANCES BELSER

b. 1960 in Zürich, Switzerland. Went to study at Scuola Dimitri Vercio Switzerland. Mountview Theatre School London and Court Florent Paris. After completing her studies she acted in various plays at Stadt Theater Basel. In 1985 she moved to Paris and completed her MA in Performing Arts at Court Florent. In 1989 she joined Théâtre du Soleil, Cartoucherie Paris. In 1990- 1992 she joined Elizabeth Le Compte, founding member of the "The Wooster Group" New York, and stages in various multimedia performances. It was the Scholarship of Ciba – Geigy America, who gave her the possibility to stay two more years and work on solo performances, videos, writing and composing music. Back in Europe she continued to enhance her writing and integrates it into her installations, video and text – based art.

Frances Belser currently works as a Project Coordinator in Tbilisi Georgia and holds a part time job as a Consultant at Hastings Audio Network in Zürich and Geneva.

b. 1969 in Zürich, Switzerland. Studied fashion design at the former School of Art and Design in Zurich, today Zurich University of the Arts. After completing her studies in 1994, she worked for various Stadt- and Staatstheater as well as in dependent theatre productions as a costume and stage designer in Germany, Austria, Luxembourg and Switzerland. Since 2000 she extended her spectrum in to the visual arts, and created installations and video performances and exhibits regularly. 2007 – 2008 she taught at the Academy of Design in Schwäbisch-Gmünd, and since 2008 she teaches in the Department of Design and the Department of Art Education at the Zurich University of the Arts. Her scholarship and residencies include: Artists in Residence, Fundaziun Nairs, Scuol, Switzerland, 3 months in 2006 and Artists in Residence, Johannesburg, Pro Helvetia, 5 months in 2009.

The focus lays on the simple everyday behavior. There is little time to rest and digest the experience of the present moment. We on the other hand want to show that all can be done consciously. In doing so we coat our movements in gold and the visual language makes a reference to the symbolic functions of the color. Are golden times ahead of us or behind us?

In a society results are measured by time. We have plenty of time. Simple everyday activities like to bounce a rope, chewing sausages, sipping tea, leads and fuses us together, into ever-changing images. There is a lot of monotony and thrilling occurrences in the rapid transition of our existence. In our collaboration we allude different variations of the issue, transform and merge diverse images, sound and voice collages to get her into a self-contained art piece.

Audio Text:

No, I haven't thought about leaving my home country.
The world has really become a big village and it doesn't make a difference anymore, where you are.
It is peaceful anywhere. It is dangerous anywhere. It is beautiful anywhere. It is dirty anywhere.
We are all together and we are one in the same heartbeat of this world, which we created together.
Do we know, where our friends sent their last e-mail from? How could we know!
When you send greetings to someone, does he or she know, who you are?
Do we know, if we breathe the air of our city or if it is heavy rains from Paris?
But we do know one thing: We share one heaven, and it shines and snows on us, wherever we are.

TRYING WALKING THE LINE

By developing my initial project from Paris for the exhibition in Tbilisi I want to link the formal language of mosaics and ornaments with the urban structure.

Therefore I will use the structural similarity of metro plans with the forms I used to work with.

In experimenting with spray paintings I discovered a technique where I am focusing more on two-dimensional illusions of space. In order to break the regularity and repetition of the mosaics I was randomly laying the ornamental elements on paper to spray on and to achieve different subtle shadings.

At my last stay in Tbilisi I was walking a track from the center to the Akhmeteli flea market where I lost the orientation completely and didn't recognize anymore whether I was standing in a city, a suburb or at the countryside.

This loss of orientation I will use as a main subject for the exhibition. For one I will use the design of the metro line from near the CCA (Marjanishvili) to the terminal (Akhmeteli Theatre) to make a sprayed wall painting with.

Secondly I will show a film where I walk the same route filmed from the back, getting out at the terminal and loose myself in one of the industrial buildings where last time I discovered a secondhand located in a big hall without artificial light.

On one hand "Trying walking the Line" is a research about the shift of mapping the urban space and its real perception. On the other hand it juxtaposes decoration with systems of orientation.

"Itch (Latin: pruritus) is a sensation that causes the desire or reflex to scratch. Itch has resisted many attempts to classify it as any one type of sensory experience. Modern science has shown that itch has many similarities to pain, and while both are unpleasant sensory experiences, their behavioral response patterns are different. Pain creates a withdrawal reflex while itch leads to a scratch reflex." Wikipedia

Based on a site-specific point of view, Jun'ichiro ISHII extremely interested in observing the bare cultural aspects.

By placing himself in unfamiliar environments, such as foreign countries with different cultures or histories, or fields of knowledge that are unknown to him, Jun'ichiro's work is initiated by a very personal speculation, or an idea that is complementary with the lack of information that comes during a process of adaptation.

He trusts that the most banal, routine and seemingly meaningless practices of everyday life contain the integral essence of the culture. Jun'ichiro focuses on daily feelings when he is in an impalpable situation, and attempt to distort this local, common scene by an intuitive process of reconstruction.

Jun'ichiro's work mainly takes the form of installation, but not the installation of works already completed in the studio. To precisely pursue pure impressions of the site, he does not begin with a predetermined method and his works do not exhibit obvious connections in terms of materials or completed forms, but by taking into account conditions on the ground he seeks to represent his very personal impressions as simply as possible. It is similar to an unusual interpretation of a usual sensation - or like a specific work, which is not only a counter method of works for white-cube, but something that depends on a local context, somewhat like a cultural-specific-art work

There is a Japanese tale that Rumiko find very reflective to her work.

One day, a person was walking on the road that he walked every day. He noticed there was a stone on the ground. Then his mind opened up suddenly by noticing this trivial thing. He felt that he stood in another world. He saw that his daily view had changed.

Rumiko Hagiwara is a visual artist who makes subtle actions in conceptual art practices, to suggest people the different angles of perceptions in daily life. She twists point of attentions and values on ordinary phenomenon with her sense of humors. These minimal interventions do not add, but rather address and point out the memories that usually pass by unnoticed as our attention is distracted by elements that occupy our daily life.

For example in one of Rumiko's installation works "Ten square meter of shadow", the spotlight projects a beam of light onto the title "Ten square meter of shadow" carved on the marble title plate. Then it creates 10m2 size of shadow behind of the plate on the empty space, so the title itself is creating 10m2 size of shadow. The structure of the phenomenon between an object, a light and a shadow doesn't change. But the work suggests viewers to change a point of attention onto the shadow in the backside and carry it out into a main stage. This suggestion makes people to discover slight distortions in ordinaries, furthermore to change their perception of the mundane object dramatically.

By making these subtle and tiny adjustments, she intends to return the viewers attention to these seemingly daily situations.

Masaru Iwai

b. 1975 in Kyoto, Japan. 2013, Maintenance Required, The Kitchen (NY, US); Needless Cleanup, Meetfactory gallery (Prague, Czech Republic); Roppongi Art Night 2013 (Tokyo, Japan). 2012, Tokyo Story . 2011, Tokyo Wonder Site Shibuya (Tokyo, Japan), TERATOTERA 2012, Neo Public (Tokyo, Japan); Mutation at the dead end (solo) 3331 Gallery (Tokyo, Japan) Artisterium 2011 -Free fall, (Tbilisi, Georgia), Slow, Down, (solo) Art Center Ongoing (Tokyo, Japan); Dancing Cleansing (solo) Takuro Someya Contemporary Art (Tokyo, Japan); Drop me! C.P.U.E.2011, nitehi works (Yokohama, Japan), TERATOTERA Festival –POST (Tokyo, Japan); On the agenda of the Arts -Where do we go from here?, Tokyo Wonder Site Shibuya (Tokyo, Japan); Tokyo story 2010, Tokyo Wonder Site Hongo (Tokyo, Japan); Spontaneous Order, Takuro Someya Contemporary Art (Tokyo, Japan) How to invert urbanism, Asahi Art Square (Tokyo, Japan).

Masaru Iwai's performances and video installations expose the precariousness of maintenance: when applied overzealously or thoughtlessly, cleaning can become an ineffectual or even destructive act. In "C-polished" with power sanders until it falls apart, Iwai shows how maintenance turned into form and voided of intention leads to the very destruction it is supposed to ward off. More recent works investigate the colonial history of Japan, such as a recorded performance in which two young person clean a dilapidated colonial-era Japanese-style home in Taipei with soap and water, using a crumpled Japanese flag as the cleaning rag.

For Artisterium, Iwai was creating the video Dancing cleansing at Tbilisi. The "dance" which can be said as manifestation of a racial and national identity "Cleaning" which is fundamental motion of our everyday life, Iwai combined two actions. It interferes in a mutual motion.

The video image, she/he has a mop and moves about a place from a place it is play and seems to extreme clean-up. Iwai coined word "cleaner's high" in since several years, it is expressing the appearance which people's feeling rises by cleaning.

Me and Your Freedom

Curators: Nino Gujabadze, Alexandra Gabunia

The significant strategic development of contemporary art - manipulation with a context - gives birth to the figurative sense of existence. The visual manifestation of the noted process is displayed within the project of the Tbilisi State Academy of Arts "Me and Your Freedom". This is a joint creative project of students and artists, which should partly be considered as a searching process for creative individuality. It therefore implies the maximum realization of personal capabilities and the creative impulses' chain of artistic actions.

In the case of this exhibition, this task becomes important. This is the adequate, coincident condition of the students' and the artists' creative searching, the identity of interests and aspirations.

The important part of this project's concept is the sense of unity and openness of national and human communication, and thus, the related sense of identity. At the same time, the concept, within an artistic context as proposed by the authors, is the trajectory of searching for conceptual links with eternal values.

The artworks presented here by a participating student and artist are directly indicative of their essence, implying the figurative reflection of their search for self-identity in the modernized world. Ethical and esthetic links personify the aspiration towards perfection; the personal creative capability for each of the participants is introduced with new conceptual artistic images.

The concept – proposed by the creative group of students, artists, and curators – is considered as the cultural process, appropriate to the creativity of the art academy's teaching process and generally, to an artistic scene, the one in which a significant facet of the country's cultural politics is defined.

The architecture of the "Me and Your Freedom" project's content, with its progressive impulse and the search for self-identity, organically corresponds with the "Artisterium" idea.

The work is the pomp of the restructured dialogue forms emerged in front of the spectator. The main emphasis lies on the juxtaposition between text and narrator, story and discourse, contact and reflection. During 1-2 Hrs. approximately the viewer can join at any time and watch and listen to the collection of real time, synchronic, silent, dubbed, inverted, spatial, noetic, collective, trilogy, mono, body and non-vowel dialogues that make and describe the interior and exterior of a dialogue in general.

Margo Korableva Performance Theatre has been founded in 1994 in Tbilisi by David Chikhladze. In 1997-99 the theatre was working at Tbilisi State Ballet School. From 1999 the theatre created various performances in the United States of America in such places as Collective:Unconscious, Here Arts, Theater Et Al, Chocolate Factory, Remote Lounge, Staten Island Arts Cypher in New York, Spirit Wind Performance Space in Philadelphia and has been invited to New York International Fringe Festival in 2002. The theatre has made The Silly Theatrical Acts workshops at Capitol City Playhouse in Austin and SKC Happy Gallery in Belgrade, Yugoslavia in 1996. Since 2009 Margo Korableva Performance Theatre continues to work with the support of Tbilisi State Academy of Fine Arts. The represented work of 2013 was also made at the Academy of Fine Arts studio. Margo Korableva Performance Theatre is a participant of Artisterium Tbilisi International Exhibition twice in 2008-09.

The project was supported by the Ministry of Education, Culture and Sport of the Autonomous Republic of Adjara.

The "Batumi Backyard Stories II" is a second event of the cultural initiative that brings together local and international artists to explore and co-create the hidden histories that exist within any given neighborhood in the city. The public art installations are paying homage to what the neighborhoods' families believe are their most precious cultural heritage stories or daily practices.

The project featuring 5 courtyards and the old bathhouse in Old Batumi district aimed to accomplish three goals: to create opportunities for local and international contemporary visual and performing artists to showcase their talents; to bring to light the most poignant personal narratives and cultural legacies of Batumi residents; and to create unique and entertaining cultural experiences for local audiences and international tourists alike through art installations and performances, etc. held in neighborhood courtyards. The invited artists worked closely with the neighborhood residents to learn what the local families believe are their most precious cultural legacies—their histories, personal stories, daily practices and customs. Subsequently, they co-created multimedia site-specific works representing their discoveries, transforming the neighborhood courtyard and the old bathhouse into a gallery/stage.

She gained recognition from the art world in Russia during the time she spent there in the '90s. She now Lives and Works in London.
